

To let the Manufacturers police themselves is like putting the Fox to guard the hen house. I am worried about the problem of RF interference. Power companies definitely do not respond to a complaint from a little fellow without legal pressure being applied and are ruthless in their dealings. I already have a problem with unlicensed devices and power line noise, so please don't make it any tougher. I have a large 4 element Cubical Quad antenna with a gain of 12.5 dbd and at the level being contemplated I would be wiped out. Please think again about members of the public who have invested thousands of dollars to get a good station and have devoted so much time to public service.
